What sort of place is Koza?

Koza sits in the middle of Okinawa Island. The city of Koza was established in 1956 by the U.S. military, and in 1974 it merged with the village of Misato to become Okinawa City. The current population is 134,890 people (as of June 1, 2010), making it the second largest city in the prefecture. Incidentally, it has the biggest population for a Japanese city without a railway, and it also has the largest percentage of children under 15 in Japan. Popularly known by the familiar name "Koza", it has flourished as the town next door to a U.S. military base, and even now, 36% of the region lies within the U.S. military base. Signs written in English line the street leading to the gate, and the foreign nationals lend a distinctive atmosphere to the area. The culture of the city is a stir-fry of Ryukyuan culture passed down from our ancestors and foreign influences.

particularly American. This style has spread to entertainment too, influencing Okinawan songs, jazz, folk and a wide range of music and entertainment, creating the new genre, Okinawan Rock. Okinawa has produced many famous artists including Rinken Band, Shokichi Kinoshita and more recently Orange Range, and there are more than 80 music-related establishments dotted about the city. The world of music in Koza goes at full blast day or night. And let's not forget, this is the best place in Okinawa for Eisa. Around the time of the Bon festival, the youth groups of each area perform their parade, attracting people with the unique atmosphere. This is a broad-minded city with a happy blend of different cultures. Experience the delights of Koza with all your senses!

Okinawa Kodomo Future Zone

● MAP/Okinawa City Center F-6

Koza is a place where children can grow up healthy and strong, to realize their dreams for the future of Okinawa. This is Okinawa City's declaration of its commitment to children, and here there's a children's wonderland that appeals to all the senses. Gathered in one place are the wonders of science and the freedom of art, a museum to stimulate the imagination of children and a zoo where you can encounter some 130 species of animal including giraffes and lions. In this theme park, kids learn by looking, touching and playing. Feeding time is cool – and is that an elephant strolling around?

PLAZA HOUSE

● MAP/Okinawa City Center C-8

Japan's first shopping center, opened in 1954, under the American administration in Okinawa. A typical American-style mall. The area remains as it was, and at Roger's you can browse worldwide fashion trends. Now in its 55th year, the Plaza House Restaurant introduced Cantonese cuisine to the Ryukyus. With shops like Acute presenting Asian interior and fashion items, this spacious shopping area is full of exotic surprises.

Heaps of fresh and crisp Okinawan vegetables. With heightened interest in food safety and a growing number of consumers demanding safer agricultural produce, this JA market has taken root as a new system for the production and sale of produce. The freshness of morning-picked vegetables, the peace of mind from seeing the producer's face, and the low prices made possible by local production and direct sale are good for your health and kind to your wallet.

About Okinawa City

Okinawa boasts a unique culture, but within this culture, the individualism that characterizes Okinawa City really stands out. The city is filled with signs in English, Japanese and other languages. Also, there's no place quite like it for Eisa and music. It's a vibe you have to experience at first hand.

A city of culture and tourism

The stir-fry of American and Asian cultures gives the city a unique atmosphere

Koza Gate Street

● MAP/Okinawa City Center D-3

From the Chinese sphere to the Japanese. From the Japanese to the American sphere and back again, Okinawa's history is one of transitions between external influences. After World War II, U.S. bases were established here, and 36% of the city is still occupied by U.S. military facilities. Okinawa City is a multi-ethnic place where people from some 20 foreign countries gather, particularly around Koza Gate St. In 1974, Okinawa declared itself a City of International Culture and Tourism. With its colorful culture and customs, the city is proud of the many languages that blossom here and encourages cultural exchange. Indian, Thai and American restaurants stand alongside the cherished old-school Okinawan eateries. The roar of American motorcycles and a Samba Carnival vie with an identity rooted in the Eisa culture. Somehow this exchange of cultures generates a greater feeling of energy than the sum of its parts. This is Okinawa City – don't miss it!

Sports convention city

The country's top athletes gather here, fueling childhood visions of future athletic glory

Okinawa City Koza Athletic Park

● MAP/Okinawa City Center B-4

The average temperature year-round is a comfortable 22°C. Its mild climate all year makes Okinawa a powerhouse for sports. Okinawa City is a sports convention city featuring two large sports facilities, the Koza Sports Park and the Okinawa Athletic Park, with athletic and baseball fields, swimming pools, training rooms and other top-class facilities. Many professional baseball teams hold their training camps in Okinawa. The Hiroshima Toyo Carp training in Koza

Sports Park every year draws excited crowds. It is also used as a winter training ground by top Japanese athletes in many sports, and it has received certification as an athletic training center from the Japanese Olympic Committee. The Koza Sports Park is used by many people from the surrounding communities, and it is also the storied site of the All-Okinawa Eisa Festival, fighting bull competitions, and the Peaceful Love Rock Festival.

City of Eisa Declaration

A city that echoes to the beat of drums and resonates to the timbre of the sanshin

All-Okinawa Eisa Festival

● MAP/Okinawa City Center B-4

A midsummer night's tradition. Two months before the Bon festival of the old calendar, the sound of drums resounds in the night sky every evening. It's the start of practice for Eisa in the community centers of each district. "Chimu wasa don don" – Eisa season has arrived. Eisa is particularly deeply rooted in Okinawa City, forming a strong part of the citizens' identity. Every year on the Bon festival, intense Eisa parades are performed in each district. The boom of beating of drums is a soulful sound representing the energy of the people of Okinawa. Young children learn by watching and absorbing the rhythm of the drums so that they too long for the time when they can take part. In this way Eisa is passed on from parent to child and from child to grandchild, forming a bond that adds intensity to the summer of Okinawa City. Every year in Okinawa City, the home of Eisa, youth associations selected from each region of Okinawa Island gather in late summer for the awesome All-Okinawa Eisa Festival.

KOZA MUSIC TOWN

A city of music where Okinawan classical music flourished of old, and where Okinawan rock emerged after the war. Therefore Koza Music Town was established as a public-private enterprise aimed at local development in Okinawa City. It is a veritable music city with a large hall seating 1,100 people, music studios, and a music square. Every Saturday and Sunday in July and August, an Eisa Night is held here for performances by the youth groups of each district of Okinawa City.

Nakanomachi

● MAP/Okinawa City Center D-4

After the war, Okinawa City was crowded with American soldiers and the local Okinawan people. The whole area around Koza Gate St. was dedicated to bars welcoming U.S. troops, and so Nakanomachi was cherished as the only area where locals could drink in peace. Even now, Nakanomachi is a place where Okinawans like to relax. Here there are bars and clubs for popular and folk music. The essence of Okinawa City can be found in the time between the late evening and the following day.
